Revised March 2009

Originally posted as part of the USGENWEB Internet project in 1998, and part of the Boyd County Public Library service to patrons 1999 thru 2007, this project continues to grow. The project would not be possible without the many hours devoted by the late Evelyn Scyphers Jackson during the Kentucky Historical Society Cemetery Grant Project. This guide is a compilation of notes, information and articles and directions that I have found through the years to form some historical background for each cemetery in our county.

A special thank you to my husband, James David Klaiber who has spent hours driving me around the back roads of rural Boyd County seeking the tell tale signs of many of the county family cemeteries. In 2004 this project continued with the aid of the newly formed Boyd County Cemetery Preservation Committee and volunteers especially to Joyce Whitlock and Marvinna Webb who have been very patient with my every whim. The original cemetery board members finished their terms in 2008.

The Kentucky Historical Society Cemetery Grant Project, begun in 1968, utilized latitude and longitude as the only form of direction, citing U.S. Department of the Interior Geological Survey quadrangle maps. However, not every cemetery, within Boyd County, was physically marked on those map series. The maps were created using topography and photogrammetric methods, utilizing aerial photographs. The original photographs were taken in 1952. Revised photos were taken in 1967 and a final field check in 1968.

The KHS Grant Project was done in several steps. First the cemeteries were physically read and the readers wrote everything row-by-row entering data on pads. The pads were then transcribed and typed on KHS forms again just as entered row- by-row or stone by stone. The forms were to be handed in and then re-entered in a computer database. Each county was to receive a print-out of the alpha sorted material. The print-out received for Boyd County does not include all of the typed forms located and utilized to help create this locator guide. Thus if the description cites an assigned KHS cemetery number it indicates that it was re-entered in the computer at KHS. If no number is cited in the cemetery entry the form [for various reasons] never were tabulated by KHS.

Cemeteries physically shown on the older quadrangle maps are indicated in this guide. The 1953 and 1957 maps are housed in the Boyd County Public Library, Minnie Crawford Winder Room. Place-Name-Index, a computer disc [created by Buckmaster, Mineral, Virginia], contains names also from the quadrangle maps of the U.S. Geological Survey including the marked cemeteries. Many cemeteries, in this guide, were not marked on any of these finding aids. The compiler has utilized Travel Maps USA, produced by COSMI, to enter latitude and longitude provided from the Kentucky Historical Project. Several errors have been corrected with this map system. Older cemeteries have been discovered since the project and the compiler and others are visiting as many locations as possible to verify the information provided.

Cemeteries in this listing may be described more than one time. Through the years cemetery names have changed with land ownership. Every effort is being made to cross- reference these duplications. However, if we have not verified that a cemetery with similar description is definitely a match we have left both citations as separate entries. We are sorry for this inconvenience. Please notify the compiler with additional information.

When visiting any cemetery, courtesies should be shown to the surrounding property owner, even if a right-of-way exists. Please stop at the nearest home and get permission before crossing properties. This also alerts others that you are in the vicinity and protects you, as well. Do not visit cemeteries alone. Always take a partner. Do not climb fences. Instead look for the nearest gate. Do not do rubbings. Stones are fragile. Use photography instead. Do not use chemicals to clean stones nor place sealants over stones. What you think is a minor protection will eventually destroy the stone. An excellent source for proper cemetery readings and care can be found in A Graveyard Preservation Primer by Lynette Strangstad, published by the American Association for State and Local History in cooperation with the Association for Gravestone Studies.

Any additions or corrections should be sent to compiler Teresa Martin Klaiber, c/o Deliverance Farm, 22937 Long Branch Road, Rush, Kentucky.

BETHESDA: Ashland. 13th Street W., turn R. on Pollard Rd. Poage Rev. Soldier's buried. [Kentucky Cemetery Records, Volume 1, KY Daughters of the American Revolution, 1960, page 62]. Property adj. Calvary Cemetery. May have been where soldiers who died during the CW at the Aldine turned Hospital were buried. Most if not all of those soldiers were removed to New Albany National Cemetery. If these were "exhumed" there has been no documentation showing such in any court records to date. According to information on the National Cemetery the bodies were "gathered" from our area in 1868 which would indicate exhumation. A History of Ashland, KY 1786 to 1954, page 102; Pictorial History of Eastern KY, Stuart Sprague, page 2 gives information. Hilton survey, original copy, BCPL, directors office holdings, 1999 shows cemetery.. However, because Bethesda burials also took place in what is known as Beech Grove and lack of documentation, question has arisen to the exact location of these burials. No visible graves, 1999

CATLETT FAMILY BURIAL GROUND: General vicinity between 25th and 27th Street upper side of Walnut/US23 at Catlettsburg. According to history approximately 4 graves: Alexander Catlett, Horatio Catlett and two daughter's of Horatio Catlett. 1824: Alexander Catlett's inventory filed Will Book 2 page 38, Greenup County, Kentucky, 7 June 1824. His only property consisted of "one brown mare."

1847: Horatio Catlett, son of Alexander, alive April 1847 when James Riggs initiated suit for debt in the Greenup County Court Orders and Catlett's deposition is to be taken. By Spring the following year the case involves the heirs of Horatio Catlett who are not in state. 1847: Bethesda Church minutes make note that Horatio Catlett died in 1847. No month of day are cited. 1850: Horatio Catlett's estate filed Will book 4 page 218, Greenup County, Kentucky. The Sheriff of Greenup County notes that his accounts were either paid or worthless from lapse of time and insolvency of the debtors..."1853: Ironton Register Thurs Feb 10, 1853 Gen'l John Poage Reminiscences No. 11 "During the first winter 1799-1900 of General Poage's residence in Greenup County he spent much of his hunting time in company with Horatio Catlett, then a boy of some 16 and who died some five or six years since at Catlettsburg." [Statement places death as 1847.] 1865: "Old Tavern Stand of Catletts Property" is filed in Boyd County Deed book 2 page 379. Later histories say that Horatio is said to have died while staying at the tavern. 1887: William Ely published The Big Sandy Valley and states "Horatio...Sawny Catlett's bones lie buried in the Old Catlett burying-ground, near the barn of Colonel L. T. Moore" This is the first instance this researcher finds stating a place of burial. Map of Catlettsburg shows L. T. Moore property with what appears to be barn. The house on the property later known as the Rebecca Patton home.

One grave showing of small child.

Original site of Green Hill Lodge #521. Green Hill later moved to Rt. #3 beside East Fork Methodist Church. Mrs. Burchett graciously showed me the outline of the remaining old wagon path leading to the flat where the lodge stood. She said that a huge tree used to have initials carved on it but had been struck by lightening years ago. The remaining large tree overlooking the old wagon road and Long Branch Road stands beside a large boulder. As we talked Klaiber discovered initials E. E. H. carved on the boulder [see photographs below]. An added touch was the large Turkey that ran from behind a group of rocks next to the boulder.

Green Hill sponsored one of the earliest schools in the county in 1869 which may have been held at this site. The signatures on the document are a "who's who" of Garner, Boyd County, Kentucky. One grave in adjoining Banfield Cemetery state burial in Greenhill but is across fence on same hill.

WHITLOCK: Directions: U. S. 60 to Old U. S. 60. Just past Manning Furniture store right on Addington Road. Up hill past Boyd County Fair Grounds. Approximately 2 miles to stop sign. Left on Strait Creek Road. Gate is about .10 from stop sign on right. At this reading [2004] gate was locked and person with key denied access. However we were informed we could see the cemetery when we visited Lawson Cemetery which is on same hill but via another entry. See Lawson Cemetery for road directions. Both cemeteries are fenced separately and Whitlock Cemetery does have a back gate. Because the back corner of both Whitlock and Lawson touch a mutual post earlier readings have tended to lump the two together. Whitlock is an individual cemetery maintained by the Whitlock family. Anyone knowing the origin of stones with "Bethlehem" stars hand incised in Coalton, Klaiber, Sexton and other Garner, Rush, Durbin and Catlettsburg area cemeteries please contact the compiler. The stars look like they are stamped in with cookie cutter.
